VICTIMS RIGHTS

1. You have the right to ask for a civil protective order or a criminal protective order with or without an attorney whether or not criminal charges have been filed.
2. You have the right to ask the prosecuting agency to file criminal charges if the suspect was not arrested or if the police close the case without filing charges. You can contact the prosecutor to review the case. If requested, the prosecutor will notify you of his/her decision to file charges within 5 days of deciding.
3. You can obtain a copy of the police report at no cost.
4. You can decline (in writing) the protection available when a suspect is arrested. If you choose to do this there will be no criminal protective order in place while the suspect is awaiting the first appearance in the case. Abusers use domination, intimidation, terrorizing, rules, stalking, harassing, and injurious behavior to control and manipulate the actions of their partners and sometimes their children.

Protective Orders

Protective orders are for victims of domestic violence. Protective orders are free and are used to protect the victims and your children from future violence, threats, or abuse. The protective order can include a no contact order and a stay away order from your home, car, work, and/or school. Legal Aid may assist you with the process and represent you if you meet their criteria. If you decide to file on your own (pro se), the application can be found online at www.utcourts.gov and it should be submitted through the 5th District Court located at 206 West Tabernacle in St. George, Utah. If the suspect violates a Protective Order or Jail Release Agreement, report the violation to police. He/she could be charged with a Class A Misdemeanor or higher.

POLICE ACTION

If a crime has occurred against you or you feel that one may occur, if the situation continues to escalate, call for law enforcement intervention. The Police will respond to check on the safety of all parties.

Police will take statements to determine if a crime has been committed. If the officer determines that a crime has been committed, Utah Law requires that the Officer make an arrest or issue a citation.

REMEMBER, YOU DON'T DESERVE TO BE HIT, THREATENED, OR ABUSED IN ANYWAY

YOU ARE NOT THE ONE PRESSING CHARGES

The charges will not be dropped. If the officer has reason to believe that the Violence will continue, there was serious bodily injury, or a weapon was used, the officer is required to take action.

When booked into jail, the suspect will not be released until he/she is seen by the court or signs a Jail Release Agreement which has the following conditions:

1. Have no personal contact with victim(s)
2. Not to threaten or harass victim(s) in any way
3. Stay away from victim(s) residence
4. Violation is a 3rd degree felony if original arrest was for felony offense; otherwise, it is a class A misdemeanor.

The Jail Release Agreement automatically expires on the date of the suspect's first court appearance (in-person) at midnight. If you would like the Jail Release Agreement conditions continued, you may request a Criminal Protective Order through a victim advocate or the court. A waiver may be available to you, by law enforcement, upon your request. If you choose to sign the waiver, it would revoke the jail release agreement conditions. For more information, please contact the Washington County Justice Court (435-634-5728) the 5th District Court (435-986-5700).

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT....

Drug and alcohol abuse increases the likelihood of violence; substances reduce inhibitions as well as the ability to make decisions and exercise control. They also reduce the ability to make decisions to protect oneself.
